Spring is the air

by Allan Purvis

Welcome to the gardening column!

Spring is here and despite the unseasonal dry spell of weather the plants in the garden appear to be thriving well. However, the recent rainfall, whilst welcome, has seen the reappearance of armies of slugs and snails that have just been waiting their chance to chomp on our favourite garden plants. I try to follow an environmentally friendly regime in order to control them, but this is not always possible. Try laying a beer trap or putting small coarse gravel or chip around the area of plants/individual plants as they do not like crossing it. There is no failsafe idea so a combination of different ones may give you the best results.

Skimmia japonica 'rubella' (pictured) is an easy to grow plant suitable for our climate here and should be widely available. It grows to around 1.5m with around 1.5m spread and can be grown in containers as well as the garden in a sheltered spot. Flowering time is March to May but our later season means it should still flower into June. The small white fragrant flowers attract bees and butterflies and are followed by red berries which will feed an assortment of birds. It is an evergreen and therefore keeps its' dark green leaves throughout the year and in late winter the small red flower buds appear awaiting the warmer spring weather to open.

As we know gardening is not an exact science so if you have any tips and hints you would like me to share then please let me know. Finally, if you have any gardening questions then please email me at birchwoodhort@gmail.com or give me a phone on 07841432290. We can include some of the answers to your questions in the next issue of The Craic.

Happy gardening!

Down to the Loch Side

by Eleanor Tulloch

A long way up where the hills are old,
Where the sun is hot and the wind blows cold.

A long way down at the waters edge,
I dangle my feet calmly over the ledge.

I almost feel rhythm deep in my soul,
Beating quite peacefully making me whole.
The water is freezing but somehow I'm warm
And the lights disappearing and the darkness is born.

Now its almost as perfect as it was before
And I'm feeling happy right down to my core.

So if ever your feeling empty and low,
Down to the loch side is where you should go.
